The Association of Illinois Soil and Water Conservation Districts (AISWCD) is the nonprofit organization that represents Illinois' 97 soil and water conservation districts and 485 men and women who serve on their governing boards.

Local soil and water conservation districts are local units of government established under state law to carry out natural resource management programs at the local level; however they do not have taxing authority.

Districts work with numerous cooperating landowners and operators to help them manage and protect land and water resources on private lands and many public lands throughout Illinois.

AISWCD CONSERVATION PARTNERSHIP

Supporting and Promoting the Work of the Association of Illinois Soil and Water Conservation Districts

Association of Illinois Soil & Water Conservation Districts

AISWCD's mission is to represent and empower Illinois' Soil and Water Conservation Districts.

AISWCD's goals are critically important.

- Represent districts as their state voice on conservation issues
- Provide useful information to local soil and water conservation districts
- Build partnerships with federal and state agencies and other organizations to carry out district priorities and programs
- Analyze programs and policy issues that have an impact on local districts
- Offer needed and cost-effective services to districts

The association operates on the philosophy that conservation decisions should be made at the local level with technical and financial assistance from federal, state and local governments and the private sector. AISWCD supports voluntary, incentive-driven natural resource conservation that benefits all Illinois citizens.

AISWCD maintains relationships with organizations and government agencies; publishes information about district activities; works with leaders in agriculture, conservation, environment, education, industry and other fields; and provides services to districts.
